WINE COUNTRY CHIC

Lisa and Charlie Palmer are Sonoma's top couple. She's the creative persona behind Lime Stone, Healdsburg's most chic boutique. He's the chef/owner of the highly acclaimed Dry Creek Kitchen right next door.

The first thing you notice when you step through the door is a delicious and delicate fragrance of bitter orange, rose and lavender. This shop stocks the hard-to-find Antica Farmicista diffusers and True Grace candles. You'll see exquisite table linens, hand-carved lamps with dupioni shades, rustic tables made from old ox-cart wheels and graceful chandeliers crafted from wine barrel staves and recycled steel. There's also a global assortment of antiques.

THE MIX:

An eclectic melange of tableware, lighting and furniture, like rustic farm tables, hand-silvered mirrors, and beautiful wine glasses.

THE DESIGNER:

"My entire life is a visual form of expression," says Lisa (left), who used to dance professionally. Now she and husband Charlie create restaurants. "We set the stage for enjoyable meals shared with people you love," she says.
